MR LINCOLN'S JOURNEY TO WASHINGTON.

Arrival of the President Elect at Columbu-Ohlo-His Reception by the Legislature Another Speech Scenes Along the Boute,

Lo., Re.,

CINCINNATI, Feb. 13, 1861. Last evening a large torchlight procession marched to the Burnet House and called out Mr. Lincoln, who briefly returned his thanks for the honor done him. A number of citizens afterwards had the pleasure of shaking Mr.

It was not until after midnight that the corridors of the Burnet House were vacated by the last of the thou-sands that had come to take a look at the President elect, and quietness settled over the immense edifice. A strong police force had charge of the hotel all night, and the Presidential party the rest they so greatly was made on the floor assigned to the President, his fa-mily and suite. Shortly after seven o'clock the entire prominent representatives of Indiana and the city com mittees then took formal leave of Mr. Lincoln and party, to the Little Miami depot.

Several thousand people were assembled around the depot to bid farewell to the distinguished visiter. An efficient police escort prevented, however, any close approach, and the cars were entered without any uncom fortable crouding. At nine A. M. precisely the whistle was sounded, and the train rolled out amidst the cheers of the innumerable spectators.

Mr. Lincoln stood on the platform of the rear car as the train went out of the depot, bowing his farewell to the crowd, who cheered onthusiastically. Mr. A. Stager, General Superintendent of the Western Telegraph Company, goes with the Presidential party as far as Buffalo, with apparatus for making a connection with wires between the stations, in case of accident to the train.

The magnificent weather to day again favored the President's travels. This, together with the happy ap-pointments of those in charge of the special train, rendered the trip to Columbus the most pleasant portion of the journey thus far accomplished. The train consisted of three passenger cars in which only about a hundred persons were comfortably distributed. The Presidential family and suite occupied the rear, the local company the mid-dle, and the representatives of the press the front car. Of prominent individuals there were aboard Adjutant General Carrington, deputed by the Governor of the State to escort Mr. Lincoln to the capital; Col. McGlan, Judge R. P. Spaulding, of Cleveland; Gen. Robinson, of Pittsburg; and Larz. Anderson, the brother of Major An-derson, and the members of the legislative reception

The President, although somewhat stiffened in his limbs by his hand shaking exertions last night, and suffer-ing from a cold, was in the best of humor all day, and chatted and laughed continually. Mrs. Lincoln was likewise in her mest pleasant mood, and conversed with the ladies and gentlemen around her in the most lively manner. Bob did not seem to feel any the worse from the sparking Catawba with which the republican youths of Cincinnati had plied him so !hoerally the previous evening, and contributed much to the general good feeling by his gay collequial ways. The two youngest Lincoln spriga were also exurberant with juvenile delight at the excit-

the train rushed on at the rate of thirty miles an hour, and reached this point before three P. M. Short stoppages were made only at Milford, Love'and, Morrow, Xenia and London stations, although large and enthus tic crowds had gathered, with bands of music and artil-

The President was slightly hoarse from his frequen speaking in the open air on the two preceding days, and his friends desired him to maintain a strict silence, but his good naturedness made it impossible for him to remain unmoved at the anxiety manifested everywhere to thear and to see him. He appeared on the platform and spoke a few kind words at each of the stopping places. Xenta a countless multitude, very largely sprinkled with co. and people, awaited his arrival, and indulged

An in the wildes demonstrations of enthusiasm and intense scramble for a two-h of his hand entitled upon the conclusion of his remara, and it was with difficulty that he beat a safe retreat into his car. An equally demonstrative ovation was made at London, the whole population of which appeared to have turned out. Owing to some misunderstanding among the Committee of Arrangements, no provision had herefore, the signal of great rejoicing among the com-any. A rugh, headed by Bob, who swooped upon his

He was visited by Governor Dennison, in the Executive room, and after introduction rocceeded to a joint session of the Legislature in Repre entative Hall, and was welcomed by Lieutenant Gover nor Kirk in a short address, to which Mr. Lincoln re

Verily, the journey of the President elect is a march triumph. Columbus is only a second class city, of twenty thousand inhabitants, but its population nust have been tripled to-day by the invasion of urious myriads from the rural districts. The public ects and squares were literally black with human eings, of all ages, sexes and conditions. While the proon moved towards the State Houselwith the hor uest of Ohio, such universal, genuine, spontaneous re-pleing as burst forth in every direction at the sight of coves most irresizibly that the popular mind of this ection of the great Buckeye State is fully convinced hat Abraham Lincoln will be worthy of the condeuce reposed in him, and in the fulfilment of is high mission look only to his country's ood. Party distinctions seem to be entirely wiped out mong the Western masses; the maintenance of the Union, ne constitution and the federal laws, is the all-pervading entiment to which men of all parties expect the future nief Magistrate of the country to respond in a truly pa-

The reception of the President elect by the General Asmbly presented a most solemn and touching scene, and that witnessed it felt the deepest emotion. Mr. Linold was so profoundly moved as to be hardly able to himself justice in his reply to the address of President of the Sepate; but the earnestness conscientiousness that plainly shone on his ace effected more with the audience than word ace effected more with the audience than words build. The following was Mr. Lincoln's address:—

Mr. Presentent and Mr. Serantes and Gertheren of the resident of the Senate, that very great responsibility is upon me in the position to which the votes of the merican people have called me. I am deeply sensible that weighty responsibility. I cannot but know what weighty responsibility and a name, perhaps without a ason why f should have a name, there has failed on the lather of his country, and so feeling I cannot it turn and look for the support without which it will impossible for me to perform that great task. I turn, on, and look to the American people and to that God on has never forsaken them. Aliusion has been made the interest felt in relation to the policy of the new ministration. In this I have received from some a desector of the transparent of the carried without a precedent which could enable me to judg the past, the hast, the seemed fitting scenes of the present, d without a precedent which could enable me to judg the past, the hast, the seemed fitting that before speaking entitle difficulties of the country, I should have gain a view of the whole field, to be sure, after all, being therety to modify and change the course of policy, as are events may make a change necessary. I have not intained silence from any want of real anxiety, for there nothing going wrong. It is a consoling circumstance and round anxiety for there nothing going wrong. It is a consoling circumstance and from it we may concludated the whole included the proper farsaken this people. Fellow cities, what I have said, I have said allogether extemponously, and will now come to a close.

State House was so persistent that Mr. Lincoln ild not tear himself away to onjoy his dinner until ro'clock. From that hour until half-past six he and family enjoyed the quictuess of Governor Dennison's vate residence. At that time its doors were thrown to the State officers, members of the Legislature, the spartments were soon crowded with the political of the State, who were received and entertained by of "Sent and Governor and their ladies in the most

His personal appearance was proncunced by all much better than had been inferred from his portraits. At eight o'clock a collation was served up, after which the President was again escorted to the State House, where an immense assemblage of ladies and gentlement were in waiting for a shake of his hand; but their in tended victim plead great fatigue, and returned to the gubernatorial mansion after a brief stay.

Mr. Lincoln was apprised by special telegraph of the counting of the electoral vote this afternoon, and heartily congratulated by his friends. Mrs. Lincoln abandoned her intentions to start from Springfield a week after Mr. Lincoln upon the suggestion of General Scott, who thought a separate journey might be construed into a sign of apprehension of danger.

THE RECEPTION OF MR. LINCOLN AT

ALBANY, Feb. 13, 1861. The committee to entertain the President elect is yet in hot water. Gov. Morgan insists that he shall have his own way, and that Lincoln shall dine at his house with a select party. He informed one of the committee that the dinner had been arranged, Lincoln had been invited and had accepted, and the committee might do as they pleased—that had been fixed. The committee convened again at twelve o'clock in the Executive Chamber. The Governor appeared before them, and insisted that he should meet Lincoln at the depot and ride up in the carriage with him; but on a direct vote of the committee it was decided that he should not, but on the contrary, should be in the rotunds of the Capitol, and welcome him in behalf of the State; and that the Mayor and Common Council should meet him at the Mayor and Common Council should meet him at the depot. This decision was like a wet sheet to the Governor. They also decided that the Senate Committee shall take him to the Senate, and the House Committee to the Assembly Chamber. They also agreed that he should be at the Delavan on the morning of Tuesday, for one hour, to receive calls from the ladies of Albany. The question then arose as to what should be done with him in the evening, and where he should dine. On this the Governor commenced to dictate, holding that it should be at his residence. Says one of the committee, "What will you do with Lincoln's staff or those in his company?" Says the Governor, "The State will pay their expenses—take them to any hotel that you please." A pertion of the committee insisted that there shall be a legislative dinner, and no close corporation about it. Being unable to come to any conclusion, after a lengthy wrangle, it was agreed that a committee, consisting of the Governor, Mayor, Chairman of the Sonate and Assembly Committees, should draw up a prograssme and submit it to the committee to-morrow morning for their action. The Governor is pleading with the members to-night for his plan, placing it on a point of honor. His position is locked upon as sublimely ridiculous. He seems to think that he owns the State. There are bitter denunciations uttered against Senator Ferry for his sneaking course. A movement is on foot to-night to get the Assembly to instruct the committee in favor of a legislative dinner

There is intense excitement on the subject, and everybody is asking, "Will the Governor monopolize Lincoln" Really, what shall be done with the first time.

THE FRESHET AT ALBANY.

The City of Albany Floeded-Vessels Driven Ashere—Great Destruction Property—Damage to the Canal, &c.

ARANY, Feb. 13, 1861.
The ice broke up in front of the city at eight o'clock this morning, causing a great destruction to property. Steamers, barges and carai boats were driven on the docks and into the streets by the immense bodies of ice. State street bridge is a complete wreck. Hamilton street is partially destroyed, as also Columbia street bridge. Several stores along the piers and dock have been par tially demolished, as well as canal boats; lumber, stave and offices have been carried down the river.

The basin presents an extraordinary scene, as boats and buildings are all jammed in together. It is impossible to approximate the amount of loss or damage, but it must be very great. The water is rising very rapidly, indicating that the ice has dammed up below. We have anticipations now of as great a freshet as occurred in 1857. The telegraph lines between here and Troy are

The ice commenced moving in the river at quarter past eight this morning. Opposite the city the break up was sudden and attended by a noise like thunder. Within twenty minutes after the start the water rose four feet, twenty minutes after the start the water rose four feet, and it has been rising ever since, until at present the rise is about seven to eight feet. The destruction o property is large, the ice being blocked below the city. The damage in the basin is roughly estimated at $60,000. Boats, propellers and other craft are driven up by the force of the ice. A cesumated at $60,000. Boats, propellers and other craft are driven up by the force of the ice. A heavy towboat and other boats were driven through the first story of the frame freight depot of the Central road, the whole front being knocked out, and the building, which is very long and two stories high, is much damaged. Two brick machine shops, owned by Mr. Punch, were destroyed in a similar manner, at the foot of Hamilton street. A propeller was driven through the wall of the Dudley House, which stands on the corner of the quay. Damage to produce and provision in store is comparatively small. At the dock the men had a strong force on during the night, in anticipation of the danger. The water in some places is up to Broadway, and in Maiden lane it reaches already to the rear of Stanwix Hall, and the cellars and basements as high as Green street are filling. At present there is little prospect of the abatement of the flood. Bridges have been broken to pieces and partially swept away, and among the ruins bridges, popellers, towboats, barges and other craft lie smashes begether in heaps. It is impossible at present to give any adequate idea of the damage done; but the destruction has been more sudden and rapid than that of 1839, though the water has not yet reached nearly as high.

We have no intelligence yet from Greenbush; but the flood on the Hudson River Railroad side of the river must be heavy.

Serious damage has also been done to the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's property in this vicinity. The loss is not known.

The water has continued to rise slowly during the day, until the entire business portion of the city east of Broadway is laundated, and business is wholly suspended. The water in several streets running parallel with the river, in the northern section of the city, is several feet high, and many families have been driven to a hasty rotreat. In a number of instances families have been obliged at last to remove by means of boats from second story windows.

Albany, Feb. 13, 1861.

We had an entertainment this morning not down on the official programme of the Legislature. Everybody expected last night that the river would certainly break up this morning, the ice bridge give way and crossing the river made impossible. Morning, however, came, and teams were still crossing the ice. The passengers on the important frame for New York at half-past seven found their way over the river without any trouble, bu mding like the roa certained that the noble Hudson had broken the ice fetters placed around her by the monarch of winter, and thus roar of the mighty waters was but her effort to release berself from the grasp which had so long held her in slumbering silence. At length the cakes of ice could be seen pushing and grinding against each other, as if no longer able to control their anger. Rapidly they crowded onward, and at eight o'clock the ice in front of Albany gave way to the pressure. The water, no longer willing to gave way to the pressure. The water, no longer willing to remain within its prescribed bounds, rushed in every direction, bearing upon its bosom the monster cakes of ice; they, in turn, grappling ferry and canal boats, and sweeping them along with the tide. The rush was so great that the water and ice, unable to push forward fast erough in the channel of the river, rushed into the canal basin, carrying everything before it. This basin was filled with canal boats, both horse and steam, as well as a number of towboats, all bound tight within the ice; but this solid anchor was not enough to save them; they were lifted from their moorings and piled in together at the foot of State street. The bridge across the basin at the foot of that street was swept away, and in its place lay crushed canal boats piled on top of each other, and the forry boat Transit on top of them, with its bows over the street.

By this time crowds had found their way to the e ferry boat Transit on top of them, with its bows or the street.

By this time crowds had found their way to the harves; the cry went forth that there were several milies in the canal boats. Skiffs were procured and forts at once made to rescue them from their perilous addition; nor were their labors in vain. Women and ildren were seen emerging from the boats, and were on announced as safe, when a general shout went up-om the excited crowd. Mules and horses were also arned cut of the boats, and they in turn found their way only land.

from the excited crowd. Mules and horses were also turned cut of the boats, and they in turn found their way to dry land.

All along the wharves the canal boats were thrown by the pressure upon the docks, the ice piled up against them, and in less than an hour the water becan to set back as if it had been dammed up below; then could be seen a hurrying to and fro in the storehouses and stores along the river. Cartmen were called into requisition and goods carted off as fast as possible, the several hoisting apparatuses worked to their utmost capacity to place the bales, barrels and every moveable article in the upper stories of the buildings. Such busy times had not been for many a day. All this timel the excited crowd were rushing back and forth to see the rush of water and ice; the ice was earried enward, crushing and grinding against each other, at a rapid rate. On it rushed down the river, carrying with it lumber, canal boats and everything that came within its grasp. At ten o'clock the ice began to alacken its grasp. At ten o'clock the ice began to alacken its grasp. At ten o'clock the ice began to alacken its great. It was at once seen that the ice had dammed up below atbany, and that the lower portion of the city was sure to be flooded and great damage done to property. The only question then left was for all to prepare for the worst. The water was rising at the rate of six inches per hour, with the prospect of abating for some time to come. Those qualifies to judge assert that the damage done will be worse than the fores are family to interest the store of family traing, and the great food.

The water is rapidly rising, and the great tears are fami-manifested as to the final end. A large number and lies have been obliged to leave their homes in skifts, are moving what little furniture they can in that manner. The Harlem is the only train that has arrived from Now York, and the passengers on that were brought to Alba-ny by the way of Troy. The afternoon train on that road left for New York from Troy.

Washington, Feb. 13, 1861.
The bill which passed the Senate to-day to carry into effect the conventions between the United States and New Granada, and also with Costa Rica, to investigate and adjust the claims of citizens of the United States against these republics, only requires action on the part of the House to become a law. The President is required to appoint commissioners to act jointly with the commissioner from those republics.

THE TARRY QUESTION.

The committee of the Chamber of Commerce of New York and Board of Trade of Philadelphia had a conference to-day for the purpose of comparing views to see whether some arrangement could not be brought about on the proposed new Tariff bill.

The committee from New York proposed to lay aside the present bill, and take up the existing tariff, making such alterations in regard to the duty on iron as would be satisfactory to the iron interest.
